Why She Lost Out.

A Shorty McCabe story, "Where Gladys FOR SALE-Lost a Bet," appears in our next Sunday Magazine. Gladys was clerk at the glove counter of a department store, and attracted the attention of big Stub McIl vers, a western mining man, who landed in New York with several million dollars, determined to settle down. He was struck with Gladys at first glance. Then it was that the lady "lost a bet." This story measures up to the good that is generally found in Sewell Ford's Shorty Stories. USE OF THE WEEKLY PRESS

Proposed to Pay for the Issue of Four-Page Supplements Booming Alabamian.

Oscar W. Underwood, the ways and means committee chairman and leader of his party in the House, is an active contender for the democratic presidential nomination. Of course, Mr. Underwood has been repeatedly mentioned by his friends as a "possibility," but that he had a campaign committee, a campaign manager and a campaign fund, did not become known until today. Now it is apparent, all of a sudden, that the Underwood boom has assumed such proportions that the friends of the other democrats who are contending for the nomination have begun to take notice. They have learned that the Underwood campaign committee, headed by Senator Authority to revoke licenses for the Bankhead of Alabama, has made a dead practice of dentistry in the District will set for delegates from the south, and the be conferred upon the board of dental activities in this direction have given a examiners if a bill forwarded by the scare to the followers of Gov. DURING COLD SPELL

Policemen, Mail Carriers and Others Scattered Food, Says Report.

Birds have been fed during the severe winter weather in the District by policemen, mail carriers and other public employes, according to a report submitted to the Secretary of Agriculture by Dr. Henry Henshaw, chief of the biological survey. The past winter has been exceptionally hard on all classes of birds game animals. Washington and Virginia have made special provisions for feeding them, and the results have been good.

The Secretary of Agriculture has reeived from the biological survey the folowing report on the progress of the nunting season in the United States: "The month of January has been marked by abnormally low temperatures throughout most of the country, accompanied in many regions by heavy snow-fall. In consequence of these adverse conditions quail and other game birds suffered severely. While the measures taken for the preservation of the birds inadequate, yet unusual interest was manifested in the threatened loss, and much activity was exerted in efforts to avert it. The National Association of Audubon Societies called the attention of the public to the need of fee and as a result of this and other appeals many persons, chiefly farmers, scattered food and provided shelter. Grain was distributed in suitable places by game wardens, mail carriers and other public officers. a thousand quail were fed by the police, while the needs of non-game birds were

In Delaware, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, Missouri, Oklahoma, Montana and other states concerted action was taken by the residents of many localities in the distribution of food. In Illinois numbers of dead prairie chickens were picked up, and the same conditions doubtless prevailed in other parts of the
